

PROTESTERS ATTACK 11 NAZIS AT A RALLY

Some of the 1,500 Demonstrators Hurl Stones in Confrontation at a Park in Evanston, Ill.

Special to The New York Times

EVANSTON, Ill., Oct. 19 — Eleven Nazi demonstrators faced a barrage of stones, bricks and eggs hurled by some people in a large crowd of counterprotestors at a park here today.

The group of counterdemonstrators, which the police estimated at 1,500 people, broke through police barricades and tried to attack the members of the American National Socialist Party, who had obtained a permit to speak at Evanston's Lovelace Park.

The Nazis, who were wearing brown shirts and helmets, carried shields, flags with swastikas and a banner that read "Holocaust, six million lives."

As one middle-aged man tried to climb over ropes to get to the Nazis, police officers restrained him, saying, "We hate 'em as much as you do."

No Speeches Are Given

The Nazis stood their ground against the assault for several minutes and then ran to their cars before giving the hour of speeches that had been planned. They were escorted out of the city by the Evanston police.

But many of the counterdemonstrators did not believe that the Nazis had gone and insisted on seeing if they were hiding in a lavatory building in the park. One man, allowed by the police to inspect the building, reported that the Nazis were not there.

Six persons were arrested at the disturbance, although one was released without being charged. Lieut. Thomas Joyce of the Evanston Police said four persons had been charged with disorderly conduct and one with aggravated battery. None of those arrested were Nazis.

Five of the 150 police officers at the rally were struck by stones. One of them was treated at a hospital and released.

Anderson Speaks at Earlier Rally

Earlier in the day, John B. Anderson, the independent candidate for President, spoke at a rally of 3,000 people on the campus of Northwestern University in Evanston that had been organized to protest the Nazi demonstration.

Mr. Anderson said there was "a dangerous resurgence of anti-Semitic events whose influence cannot now be ignored" and he attributed it, in part, to economic hard times.

He said that "unacknowledged prejudice" was dangerous and that "it is a sin to remain silent" in the face of anti-Semitic demonstrations.

The rally at Northwestern was attended by many local politicians, including Jay Lytle, the Mayor of Evanston, who said, "Issuing the permit to a small group of rabble is the most repugnant act I have had to participate in as Mayor."

Rally on Yom Kippur Denied

The City Council of Evanston issued the permit for today's rally after denying the Nazis' request for a permit to demonstrate in Evanston on Yom Kippur last month.

Michael C. Allen, Midwest coordinator for American National Socialist Party, whose headquarters is in the Chicago suburb of Marquette Park, said last week that his party had no members from Evanston among its 65 active Chicago-area members. He added, "We will have after the rally."

None of the Nazi demonstrators could be reached for comment after today's rally.
